Steward among important African-Americans in technology

David Steward, chief executive of World Wide Technology Inc., has been named one of the 50 most important African-Americans in technology by BlackMoney.com.

Steward is one of 40 chief executives that made the list released Thursday. Others named include executives, government decision-makers, a member of Congress, educational leaders and the head of a professional organization. Entrepreneurs on the list have built firms with more than 1,000 employees.

Among others named to the list include Gale Sayers, chief executive of Sayers in Mount Prospect, Ill.; and Richard Parsons, chairman and chief executive of Time Warner Inc.

Chesterfield, Mo.-based WorldWide Technology, which specializes in electronic procurement, logistics and information technology, had $800 million in revenue last year.
