A five-time FAST 50 winner and the largest African-American owned corporation in the United States, World Wide Technology employs almost 600 people in offices and distribution centers located in St. Louis, McLean Va., Aberdeen, Md., Dallas, San Diego, and Silicon Valley. The company is the leading electronic Procurement and Logistics (e-PL) company in the information technology industry. Partnered with the largest technology companies in the world including, Sun Microsystems, CISCO and Dell, WWT specializes in helping its federal and commercial customers to rapidly build and deploy their IT infrastructure in an on-time and cost-effective manner. WWT's e-PL capabilities include web-based purchasing, product distribution, just-in-time staging, warehousing, asset tagging, auditing and integration of information technology equipment. Revenues grew last year to more than $800 million.

The key, says Dave Steward, chairman and CEO, "is a team of solid, committed people who work with you in the organization. They go the extra mile for the customers and use the technological tools that give us a competitive edge." Steward, named to Civic Progress last year, founded the company in 1990.
